

Mission Statement

The Association for Multicultural Affairs in Transplantation (AMAT) supports our partners in the transplant field as they save and heal lives in our diverse communities

All nationalities benefit from organ donation and transplantation

Serving a Multicultural Perspective

AMAT is a dynamic organization with members who work in organ procurement organizations, tissue banks, tissue processors, eye banks, and transplant centers.

AMAT envisions a nation where transplant organizations apply a multicultural perspective to their relationships with donor families, transplant patients, health care professionals, and the general public and where people of all cultures embrace the ideals of organ, eye and tissue donation as a social responsibility.

AMAT was founded as the American Society for Minority Health & Transplant Professionals in 1982, and the name, vision, and mission statement were updated in 2010 to reflect the current needs of the donation and transplantation industry.
